Home Evidence

No other preparation has won success at home equal to Hood's Sarsapariils. In Lowell, Mass., where it is made, it is now, as it has been for years, the leading medicine for purifying the blood, and toning and trengthening the system. This "good name at home" is "a tower of strength abroad."

It would require a volume People to print all Lowell people have said in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Mr. Albert Lowell Estes, living at 28 East Pine Street, Lowell, for 15 years employed as boss carpenter by J. W. Bennett, president of the Eric Telephone Company, had a large running sore come on his leg, which troubled him a year, when he begin to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. The sore soon grew less in size, and in a short time disappeared. Jos. Damphy, 214 Cen-Praise tral Street, Lowell, had swellings and lumps Hood's which Hood's Sarsapa- Sarsaparilla completely cured. Mrs. C. W. Marriott, wife of the First Assistant Fire Engineer of Lowell, says that for 16 years she was troubled with stomach disorder and sick headache, which nothing relieved. The attacks came on every fort hight, when she was obliged to take her bed, and was mable to endure any noise. She took Hood's Sarsaparilla, and after a time the attacks ceased entirely. Books For Children.

The parents of the present generation of children, looking with envious eyes on the multiplicity of books that crowd the nursery shelves, sigh as they remem ber the few well-worn volumes of their vounger days. "What might we no have attained," they say, "had our ad vantages equalled those of our little ones." In our day, first, Mother Goos-(bless the dear old lady!) and Robinson Crusoe, then. Then Arabian Night The Scottish Chiefs, and The Children of the Abbey made up the library of there is no end, and the best art of paper maker, printer, engrayer and colorist, is freely expended to reader them attractive. The veriest baby would eyes and stimulated the imagination of the infants of other days. Our children also have innumerable magazines and papers as well as an infinite variety of bound books. The editors of these are best paid of our literati. Indeed no genius is now thought too proud or too a most elegant stock of

The classics, tested and approved by many generations of readers. But who can keep pace to-day with the great presses moved by steam and the army of writers who supply them with ever increas ing material? Where so much is printed there is certainly danger that all is not of the best quality, yet the little fellow who pores with intense interest over the pages of the last new book that has been given him is forming mental hab its that may determine the bent of his future aspirations. He will never again be so susceptible to every intellectual influence as now, in his early chilhood. Now he is making. By and by he will reads is pure and wholesome? Another danger inheres in such an mbarressment of printed riches. Their very abundance tends to produce indifference. Like air and water, and bread and butter, books are so much a matter of course, they are not always highly prized. They are apt to be sligh ted in the reading, and then, if the child reads superficially, where is the chance for that slow, steady, sure growth of power, that comes only from that kind of reading that assimilates the subfood? If one boy skims rapidly a hundred books, while another broods with loving, serious, patience over ten, which gains most as he reads!

The truth is mother-love and nother care are the best antidotes for every poison. Temptation and danger do merease as the world grows older and richer, and life becomes more complex and actificial. It is true there are greater opportunities for youth that were ever offered before. There is also greater need for care. Maternal watchulness must keep even step with world ly wisdom, if children are to grow in grace as they grow in knowledge.

The Secret of Success.

"What is the secret of your success, Judge?" inquired a young law student of Judge H., one of the most successful lawyers in the Northwe-t.

"Well," said the Judge, with a retrospective air. "I don't know as there is any secret about it. In my younger days I had a rough row to hoe, but I hoed it well. There was lots of work in those days to do, but the pay was smal. When I was a stripling, of from ing farmers during the season of having and harvesting, and when they came to krow me I could always get higher wages than older and stronger men, because I always made it my having or my harvest, working as if the field and crop belonged to me. Whether my employer was present or absent it made no difference with my work And that has been my single rule of work through life, at the backsmith's forge, in the harvest field, or as a hired attorney at the bar. I worked with might, mind. and strength in any cause in which I was engaged. Now that's the whole of it -and that surely is no secret."

But it is a secret, we regret to say, that large numbers of young men never learn; and if a man does not learn it early in life the chances are he never will find it out. At any rate it is thing in the Dry Goods line. Groceries, Produce, etc., at prices to meet competition. A word true in fact that this simple rule of fidelity to the interest of employers is not made the rule of practice by thousands of men employed in the various trades, had any interest in the business, but simply to get the pay for it—the largest ossible sum of the least work. "My greatest trouble," said a busi ness man recently, "is in procuring help to carry on my establishment. Plenty of hands in the market; but I want hands with heads on them. My work requires brains as well as muscle, and the difficulty is to get men who will give heed to their work and take an interest in it." That man's experience is the result of this vast experience.

It is a powerful Restorative Tonic and Nervine, inspirity is or and veryine, inspirity is or and very inspirity is or and veryine, inspirity less man recently, "is in procuring is not at all singular or exceptional. All men carrying on business requiring and Siceplessness, in either sex. is not at all singular or exceptional. a large number of employes will tell the same story, that their main trouble is securing men with skill, who will take the requisite degree of interest in their work.

The labor market is overstocked with hands seeking employment. And yet in the great world there is a constantly increasing demand for hands with heads on them, or men who will apply all their wits and devote all their powers to the business to be done. In this field the demand greatly exceeds the supply. There never has been a time ful worker could not obtain employment, and there is no danger of a surplus of that kind of men in the market. The demand is octive, and the pay is always liberal. Even when it is all full doing thoroughly and thoughtfully whatever work they had to do, There is no deep secret or mystery about this matter; it is not by chance or luck that the most of the wealthy or emment men attained their enviable positions. They and of test us full part tchieved success by taithful, commonplace diagence, attention to duty, and honesty. Sir Isaac Newton wrote, "Genius is patience." And patience is but another name for that quality of fidelity to duy that surely brings its rea ard. Young men tittle realize how bighly this quality is prized among the men who handle great enterprises and who are compelled to employ assistance in their business. There are throngs of applicants for the positions of trust and responsibility at their disposal; but they want only the highest and best sort, for which there is the greatest demand and of which there is the least supply. And for these there is a constant search and inquiry That kind of a workingman, in whatever trade or protession, doesn't as a rule have to go out looking up a job; the men who have the job to be done are out hunting after

This sort of plodding faithfulness, the single eyed devotion to the intere-ts of employers, is certain to be recognized in due time and sure of its fitting recompense And it is not hard of attainment if a right beginning is made. The first thing essential is to take an interest in the work seeking to do it thoroughly and in the shortest possible time without overwork. The simple rule should be, whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well.

Now, allowing that there are hard, gold, and selfish employers, who will grind down even the most faithful workers, as men ride s free horse to death. yet it holds good as a rule that the class of men we have described are sure to be recognized and rewarded in the end. If there were mere of that spirit of fidelity there would be less friction between employers and employes, fewer labor agitations, strikes, and boycotts, and the walking delegate would have to find ome more useful vocation.
